Online Resources for CN 728 Psychometrics & Assessment

Getting Started

Try to locate an existing test. Using existing measurement tools when possible is preferable because:

- Your results can be compared to other studies thus increasing reliability and validity of your study.
- The creation of a new test is time consuming, requires expertise you may not have and the gathering of test subjects and often results in additional expense.

The American Psychological Association’s document titled “Finding Information about Psychological Tests” http://www.apa.org/science/programs/testing/find-tests.aspx is very helpful. Here are some of the resources they mention:

- Mental Measurements Yearbook Online subscription available through Lakeland Library
- Tests in Print, available online as part of Mental Measurements, but also available in book format in some libraries. Not in Lakeland Library.

Another resource is Comprehensive Handbook of Psychological Assessment (2004) available in Lakeland’s John Esch Library. Contact Teresa Grimm (grimmtm@lakeland.edu) to access.

Lakeland Online Test Resources

Mental Measurements Yearbook with Tests in Print
Available through EBSCOhost databases. Includes test author, publication date, publisher information, test purpose, price, acronym, intended population, time to administer and reviews for many of the tests. For the tests that are reviewed, references are included which can lead to additional information.

PsycTESTS is available through ProQuest. This research database provides access to psychological tests, measures, scales, surveys, and other assessments as well as descriptive information about the test and its development and administration. Most content is for non-commercial tests.

Search Suggestions

When searching for articles on testing, try including keywords such at methodology, interview, survey, assessment, inventory, measure, measurement, post-test, pre-test, questionnaire, rating, scale, sub-test, survey, test or tool.

Identify the subject headings used in the database you are searching by using the database’s thesaurus if one is available. Subject headings are terms used consistently by a database company to identify the main focus of an article; thus, using subject headings helps you retrieve more relevant results. You can also determine subject headings by looking at the records of a couple of your search results that seem to be relevant to your topic.

Finding Referenced Articles

Have you found a citation for an interesting article on the reference page of another article or in your textbook that you would like to locate? Give our E Journal List A-Z a try. Enter the name of the journal in which the cited article appeared and our E Journal List will tell you if that article can be found in one of Lakeland’s databases.

Inter-library Loan

You found the perfect article, but it is not available online? Don’t despair! Give the library’s interlibrary loan services a try. Fill out the interlibrary loan request form, (Lakeland.edu/Request)

We will request the article from another library. Available articles typically arrive within 3 business days with some taking two weeks.

Locating Information on Conditions

Center for Disease Control (cdc.gov)
Badgerlink (library database)
- Consumer Health
- Encyclopedia Britannica
